Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a hair curling apparatus, and in particular, to a hair curling apparatus and a method for fabricating the same that can more stably make hair curls. 2. Description of the Related Art Hair such as the human hair is a very important part of the human appearance. A person can alter the overall appearance of his/her face by changing the hairstyle, thus cosmetic hairstyle designers and hair stylists have always pursued various methods to achieve different hairstyles. In general, the hair, having been cut into a certain length, is cut into pieces having a certain width before being cut into a curl. After being cut into pieces, the hair is then curled using a hair curling apparatus, so that a curled piece of hair is obtained. The hair curling apparatus may be divided into an immersion type and an air-flow type. The immersion type is used to heat hair, guide the hair through a holder, and cool the holder, thus obtaining a curled piece of hair. The air-flow type is used to cool the hair, guide the hair through a heater, and heat the heater, thus obtaining a curled piece of hair. In the air-flow type of hair curling apparatus, the holder is generally made of a concave holder, and the hair is placed in the holder, thus making the hair curls. However, the hair is only held by the concave holder, thus making the hair curls stably. However, the holder has a complex structure, and the manufacturing costs of the holder are high. In addition, the holder cannot be used for different hair types.Ohio State Football Update: Buc
